

Secession Meeting in Winchester, Tennessee.

Probably the first out and out disunion meeting ever held in this State came off in Winchester on the 26th, as we learn from a correspondent. Notice had been given by Messrs. P. TRASKY and M. TENNEY that they would speak on "Secession, the Duty and Prospects of the South." It being the first day of Circuit Court, the attendance was large. Our correspondent says:

"Their speeches were of an inflammatory character, abusing Lincoln and the Black Republican party, insisting that immediate secession by separate State action, before Lincoln's inauguration, was our only remedy. They lay much stress on separate State action, taking ground against a general Southern Convention, and against a State Convention, saying we have not time. They are evidently posted, and acting in concert with the South Carolina movement. "They praise South Carolina and say she is clearly right, and we must go with her. They take the ground that the Union is already dissolved by the action of the Northern States, which have nullified the fugitive slave law.

"After they got done Col. A. S. Colyar made a speech against secession, and especially against the precipitate action of South Carolina, and in favor of a State Convention, to be gotten up by a called session of the Legislature. Col. C. pressed the point that South Carolina was doing us a great wrong by seceding without consulting or conferring with the border States; that it was an attempt to involve those States in a revolution against their will, and that South Carolina was unwilling to abide the calm and deliberate decision of the whole South.

"At the conclusion of Col. C.'s remarks he announced that there would be another meeting on Wednesday, when he would further discuss these questions, and that it was also desirable that steps be taken urging the Governor to convene the Legislature to order a Convention and to consider of the coming question.

"This day's work opened the eyes of the people. Many of them say that they did not expect so bold a move so soon; and a new issue is emphatically before the people of this country. I was surprised to see the readiness of the great mass of the Democracy to lay down party affinities and stand by the Union."
